Mayor Fuller Will Retain His Seat, stroll through the town. While walking She Unfolds a Little Scheme to Make But His Small Majority Astonishes the Natives.

A Lively Election, With a Result Not Unexpected...Big Cry, Little Wool.

It was the republicans' night to howl last night, and howl they did, but they were pardoned because it was such a little fare they heard a call for polices which evidently came from Rodney street. A minute later a young man came swifty running one. The organ of the party said that nothing less than 600 republican majority would satisfy the party, and as Mr. Fuller's majority is only 85, the g. o. p. of Helena must be the most dissatisfied body in existence. But they howled all the same. The young men of the party did the cheering. After the returns were all in and the kid-gloved element became aware of the location of the party mayor was to be the contradictory stories about what he was the later a young man came swifty running down Bridge, hat in hand. The officer stopped him, and the stranger who was held up immediately recognized him as one of his assailants. Although no complaint had been heard, it is probable the pair unsuccessfully tried a second time to hold up a man on Kodney street. At the jail the prisoner gave his name as John Scannell, but admitted that was not his right name. He told several folded a scheme to her admirer whereby they were to make lots of money, if he fact that the present mayor was to be the next mayor, they became as frisky as coits in springtime, and tying their handkerchiefs-some of them badly disabled-to their canes they made a sortie and attempttheir canes they made a sortie and attempted to turn the town up on its edge and but holes through. That they succeeded to some extent will be evidenced by sore heads this morning. The consumption of heads this morning. The consumption of cigarettes and soda water was alarming. The most sanguine democrats realize this is a republican city, but thought that majorities might be cut down so as allow Mr. Loeb to be sure of the office of mayor—a thing devoutly wished for by more than one republican, as the returns prove. But there are too many men employed on public works at present. These were voted to a man for Mr. Fuller.

HELPED HIM ALONG.

The polis were not opened till 1 o'clock and closed at 7, but it was noticeable that the majority of the votes were cast before 5 o'clock. The usual number of workers around the polls in each ward were well supplied with ballots, which they were willing to hand out to persons who had not supplied themselves, and some would even importune to be allowed to make alterations suggested, but not allowed to do so except in a few cases.

VEST-POCKET BALLOTS. A noticeable thing in the Fifth ward was A noticeable thing in the Fifth ward was the number of vest-pocket voters. It was this ward which elected Mr. Fuller, a num-ber of the young men who had declaimed against him last week having been whip-ped into line; and they went up to the poils, not penitent by any means, but real-izing that they must take their medicine because their elders ordered them to, and they took it with many a guln and attack they took it with many a gulp and struggle, but took it nevertheless.

Both parties had conveyances of all kinds running while the polls were open, and many a voter was brought from a remote distance and finding himself unregis-tered, would swear in his vote. A notary public was convenient at every ward, and his assistance was needed on numerous occasions, especially in the Second ward, where upwards of twenty votes were sworn in that had not been registered. It is claimed that every vote sworn in was cast for the republican

NOT A LARGE VOTE. ticket was only 2,861, only ten in excess of the registration, showing that there must have been a number who did not vote, have been a number who did not vote, when it is taken into consideration that at least fifty in the various wards were sworn in. Then by judges making mistakes seventeen ballots were deposited in the boxes for the bond ballots. Of these eleven were democratic and six republican. If they had been counted Mr. Fuller's majority would be only eighty. However satisfactory the vote may be to the democrats, who only hoped for results, it must certainly be humiliating to the republicans, who at no time until the count was announced were satisfied with less than 300. Out of the wreck, if it may be so called, the democrats save two aldermen, Mr. Lissner in the first, re-elected, and Mr. Allen in the Second, who succeeds Mr. Wirth, also a democrat.

The majorities of mayor, treasurer and police magistrate are as follows:

Judge Sanders' majority leads, and he is correspondingly happy. The judge suc-ceeds himself. Mr. Lissner had no opponent. Mr. Allen's majority over Mr. Rich ter is 57. There was a harder fight made in his—the second—ward than in any other. Although there were additional police their services were not needed during the day, everybody being in good humor and chaffing his neighbor. But last night the policeman's lot was not a happy one. There was too much enthusiasm and several arrests were made.

The vow for sewer bonds was not obtainable from all the wards, but the proposition carried, there being little or no opposition. in his-the second-ward than in any other.

The young man held up was taking a from Bridge to Wood streets he was suddenly surprised by a pair of youths, each of whom caught him by the arms and, pointing pistols at his breast, told him to walk along and keep quiet. They escorted him down Water street a short distance, when he jerked himself loose from their grasp and gave a yell.
